

Batters & Doughs

Yeast Breads

Ingredients

Quick Breads

Baking Equipment

Contemporary
Baking

Biscuits

Muffins

Cakes

Cookies

Baking Basics Review

The following statement is the definition of _____.

A mixture of flour and liquid, with sometimes the inclusion of other ingredients. Batters vary in thickness but are generally semi-liquid and thinner than doughs. Used in such preparations as cakes, quick breads, pancakes and crepes.

Quick breads can be divided into groups according to the proportion of flour and liquid used. Fill out the following chart with the appropriate information.

Description	Proportion of flour	Proportion of liquid	Examples

What are the 3 methods for mixing quick breads and give a brief description of each

-
-
-

Quick breads are leavened by one of the following: Baking _____, air, steam or _____ soda. Leavening causes the product to _____

What are some examples of quick breads?

-
-
-

Fruit loaves, like banana bread, are better the next day because _____

Biscuits are classified as a _____. The dough for biscuits is mixed using the biscuit method. What special tool is used in this method and what is the purpose of it?

Pancakes, waffles and crepes are all types of this batter? _____

What is the difference in the batters of pancakes, waffles and crepes? _____

What is the unique characteristic of a popover? _____

What is meant when asked to describe the “Standard” of a product? _____

What 2 types of flour can be used for cakes?

-
-

There are 2 basic types of cakes, shortened and unshortened. Give an example of each

-
-

A shortened cake, a.k.a. butter cake, has what ingredient that an unshortened cake does not?

There are 6 basic kinds of cookies, give an example of each.

- bar –
- drop –
- refrigerator –
- rolled –
- pressed –
- molded –

What are the similarities and differences in the kinds of cookies?

What are the ingredients in quick breads, cookies & cakes & what function do they perform?

	Structure
	Leavener
Fat
Sugar
	Binds ingredients
	Blends ingredients
Salt
Vanilla, fruit, nuts, cocoa, etc.	